

02 Bengali

- The learners develop an overall aesthetic and humanistic outlook for understanding life and literature.
- The learners become acquainted with different creative writing and other literary and critical skills related to the vernacular
- The learners learn to appreciate diverse aspects of Bengali culture and literature as a vital factor promoting Bengali cultural unity globally.
- As a language literature subject which holds the 6th position as a spoken language in terms of speaking population, Bengali still remains one of the most widely chosen fields for opting academic study at UG and PG levels. Learning Bengali hence opens a new way to understand and appreciate other existing world literatures.
- Technical knowledge of Bengali grammar and literature also provide ample scope for jobs like editing, proof reading and journalism.